BIG TIME AT THE COUNTY SEAT MONDAY TO HEAR CANDIDATES

Hon. Ben Johnson and Judge Settle Attract Large Crowds--Judge Sandidge Arrived to Preside Over Circuit Court.

There was a great crowd at Hardinsburg Monday. All sections of the county were represented and the people came from far and near to see and to be seen, to hear the news and chiefly to see the candidates, for politics filled the air.

Judge W. E. Settle and the Hon. Ben Johnson, who were billed to speak, were greeted by an enthusiastic crowd, which packed the court house. Mr. Johnson spoke first. In his plain, straightforward, earnest way he told the people what was being done to them by the trusts, combines and the robber tariff. He made it very clear that the great common people were being robbed right along, to pile up big fortunes for the few money kings. He said the only issue now before the people was the tariff. That the great Republican party could no longer fool the people on the question and the rank and file of that party were breaking away.

At the conclusion of Mr. Johnson's wholesome speech, Judge Settle was introduced by Claude Mercer. The crowd listened with interest to the Judge whom they are to have for Appellate Judge.

Aside from the candidates the crowd was especially concerned in Judge W. O. Sandidge, who was appointed by Gov. Wilson, to preside over Circuit Court. He did not arrive until noon and little was done in court. Yesterday promised to be a busy day for the Judge and the Grand Jury.

Commonwealth's Attorney, J. R. Laymen, was on hand promptly to look after the interests of the commonwealth in its usual good way. He has a splendid Grand Jury to help him. Made up as follows: Taylor, Howell, Irvington, foreman; John W. Ball, McQuady, Alton Clemmons, Rockvale; Chas. Bowdies, Axel; James Stillwell, Stephens; Eugene Beavin, LaHant; T. B. Carl, Union Star; James Perkins, Mattingly; Fred McMillen, Axel; A. B. Cushman, Union Star; Eli Tash, Hardinsburg; John Critchlow, Hardinsburg.

THURMAN--ROBERTS WEDDING

Miss Mae Thurman and Mr. Virgil Dix Roberts Are United in Marriage in Louisville Last Wednesday

WILL LIVE IN TEXAS

Hardinsburg, Oct. 10 (Special).—On Wednesday, Oct. 5th at 5:30 o'clock, at the home of Miss Edna T. Cremin, 1215 Garvin Place, Louisville, Ky., occurred a wedding, the culmination of acquaintance and courtship begun six years ago in the University of Kentucky between a fair daughter of Pulaski county and a worthy son of Breckinridge.

The contracting parties were Miss Mae, the only child of Mr. J. B. Thurman, a sterling business man of Sumner, Ky., and Mr. Virgil Dix Roberts, youngest child of Rev. Felix R. Roberts a well known preacher of the M. E. church, South, now of Louisville, Ky.

The bride is a 1905 Scientific graduate of the State University. In 1906 the groom was graduated from the same institution in electrical and mechanical engineering. Since graduating, he has been actively engaged in civil engineering work in Georgia, Arkansas, Kentucky and Texas. On July 1910, he became contracting engineer for the Weatherford Bridge Poun ry, of Weatherford, Texas, where he has a splendid position at a lucrative salary.

The bride is a daughter of a well known and late train, the wedding took place at the beautiful and hospitable home of the bride's friend and classmate and university roommate, Miss Cremin, instead of at the Seelbach, as was scheduled. The pastor of the Broadway Baptist church, impressively pronounced the ceremony in the presence of a few friends and relatives among who was Mrs. Thurman, the mother of the bride, and J. B. Roberts, the brother of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party took supper at the Willard Hotel after which the bride and groom left for Weatherford, Texas, where they have been at home to their friends since Oct. 10th.

Breckinridge county has furnished the Lone Star State no worthy citizen than Virgil Dix Roberts, and together we rejoice that through his jet in the Lone Star State he is at long a "he" man and is happily mated and located with every promise of years of success and happiness.

INTERRUPTED

Was Traffic On The Henderson Route Because Of Washouts And Floods.

Again the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railroad was a great sufferer from the flood of water which fell for forty-eight hours ended last Thursday at noon, and again was the freight and passenger traffic on this road interrupted for two days, ending with Friday night. This time the trouble occurred again in the Narrows above town and to the Lead Creek trestle below town.

The trouble on the road began when, on Wednesday a wash-out near Henderson delayed traffic. The rains that fell Wednesday night caused the immense hill in the Narrows to slip, and it is said that the dirt which came down on the track in the early part of the night not only stopped the west-bound cannon ball, but covered the track and went on nearly to the water's edge. It is claimed that ten times as much dirt came down on this occasion as there was when the big wreck occurred at the same place some eight weeks ago. The work train with its immense steam shovel was called out from Cloverport and put to work, and by 11:00 o'clock Thursday night a trestle was able to get into Hivesville from above, but here it was again stopped by the Lead Creek trestle.

At an early hour Friday morning the pile-driver train was put to work on this trestle, and workmen were of the opinion that the bridge could be so straightened up in ten or twelve hours that trains could be taken over the place. This trestle was in a wretched condition. Five of the central beams of twelve feet each, was entirely washed away and the ties and track were left suspended in mid-air. The track had slumped at least two feet out of line, the inclination being toward the river, and in its span of sixty feet without supports the steel had dropped several inches. The great pile driver was put to work replacing these supports. The workmen claim that this trestle would have been destroyed in the great storm and flood of July 27 had it not been for the stone county bridge which was only a few feet away and between the trestle and the river. This bridge, it will be remembered, was destroyed after having successfully withstood the forces of sixty years, and the last rain of this week even crumbled away nearly all of the remaining approaches.

Superintendent L. J. Irwin, of the Henderson Route, came down on Thursday night and was here Friday morning. To the Clinton man he stated that concrete and steel trestle and Creek would be built in the near future, which would obviate the character of trouble they were now experiencing there, but that the unsettled condition would not allow to be done at this time.—Hancock Clarion.

ROAD NEGLIGENCE BY GOVERNMENT

Railway Man Shows Money is Wasted on Highways.

WILL SAVE FARMERS MILLIONS

B. F. Youkum Talks to National Convention on Development of Country as Proof That Highways Should Be Improved by National Appropriation.

One of the most interesting addresses delivered before the National Good Roads association at Niagara Falls recently was that of B. F. Youkum, chairman of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad company. The keynote of his address was that the government wastes enough to build all highways and the saving to farmers of millions of dollars. The salient points of his speech were:

"Your organization stands for a duty neglected by the government. Good roads mean more for the people at large than any other public work and add more to the comfort and up building of the country. They are of national importance.

"Government statistics tell us that it costs our farmers 15 cents more to haul one ton one mile in this country than it costs in European countries. The products of the farms of the United States last year amounted to approximately 250,000,000 tons. The government shows the average haul of a ton was nine miles. This difference of 15 cents a ton per mile represents an additional cost of $1.55 a ton for an average haul of nine miles. Estimating that two-thirds of the agricultural products of last year were hauled away from the farms, there would have been a saving to the American farmers of $225,000,000 if our roads had been up to the standard of European roads, not including their lack of supplies from the stations to the farms. They would also have saved large sums in the cost of repainting and repairing harnesses, wagons, etc., and in the maintenance and care of extra draft stock.

"I took three-quarters of a century to build up the American railroads. During the same time little attention has been given to the building up of American country roads. Yet the value of the two to the public is equally in kind. Food and clothing must be hauled between the producers and the consumers over both the country roads and the railroads. It is generally held that the country roads approach the high standard of the railroads.

"The greatest value of good roads will be to the farmers who have not as yet become interested. You have not yet found a way to reach them to properly place your arguments and statistics before them. They need to be shown that the poorest roads are the most expensive roads. They have not been shown that their broken wares, livestock, harness and miscellaneous bills add them more than the cost of having good roads. They have not been shown that a four dollar a day team can do the work over good roads, which makes that team worth to them $8 a day. The way to get good roads is to make all the people know that the country roads are really in mind. The transportation system which carries our food and clothing from maker to user is part railroad and part country road. It is as necessary as the other. Your organization in its support of the betterment of our public highways should talk in millions instead of thousands.

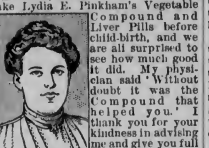

"We have 2,000,000 miles of public roads. From the best information obtainable there are about 4,100 miles, or two miles out of each 100, under a high standard of improvement. There are not more than 17,000 miles, or eight miles out of each 100, under any kind of improvement. In other words, we have 1,825,000 miles of public roads which are in as poor condition now as they were when they were laid out by our early settlers and pioneers.

"If we build 100,000 miles of public highways annually for ten years and give to this country 1,000,000 miles of good public roads at an average cost of $3,000 a mile, or $300,000,000 annually, we will be engaging in a national development of the advantages of which in commerce, convenience, comfort and enhanced land values none can foretell. We will be accomplishing something worth while. This work of curing the nation's roads is a task of the present will be very slow. It should be encouraged under a broad, comprehensive plan outlined by the federal government, cooperating with agricultural states. The agricultural department of the government is in sympathy with all things that tend to improve our rural road system.

"Your association should have aggressive organizations in every state and have working relations with all commercial, manufacturing, educational and cultural institutions. While I can speak but for one system of railroads, I feel confident that every railroad of our country will be in sympathy and work in harmony to aid in the development of the country's public highways, with a view of upbuilding and increasing the production of existing and cultivated fields and adding new areas that are now lying idle for lack of rail, transportation or good public roads to encourage their cultivation."

WEDDINGS STRIPPED OF FUSS

In Brittany Matrimonial Candidates Are Hired Together and Married in a Bunch.

Over in France they have a way of getting rid of all the undesirable features which in the United States go with getting married. They have the scheme in operation in Brittany. There they do away with the best man and bridesmaids and other such impediments strewn in the path of the American celebration of the matrimonial ceremony. Even the dressmaker and the milliner and the florist are given the laugh. Their goods aren't needed.

About the middle of January every year there is a general roundup of all the men and women who have been engaged, within the twelve-month. They are herded together in one place, and on the appointed morning along comes the priest and marries them in a bunch. No fads, no feathers, no "Lobengrin" or Robin Hood stuff, no ushers or bridesmaids to carry away your sisleppins and your brooches, and no extravagant national costume, simple in construction though gaudy.

There were 27 couples married at Plougastel January 11, 54 were counted there. Among the 54 were only four names. Everyone married was a Legall, a Jesequel, a Thomas or a Kassemer. Of the 54, 27 were named Marie and three were named Marie Legall.

The caterer got his rake off from the barbeque which followed the ceremony. He served 27 sheep, and six cows at the wedding breakfast.

Another Panacea.

A physician of some note has just announced another panacea for all the ills humanity is heir to. It consists of a small bottle of cream. Among the ailments which it is said to have cured by this means are tubercular ulcerations, skin diseases, old cuts and sores, and obesity. The cream is said to triple fat with adipose tissue. It will like snow under the carcases of the sun. It is declared. "To take a sun bath," the doctor explains, "it suffices simply to stretch one's self completely unclothed in the direct rays of the sun, taking care always to protect the head, and above all the back of the neck. There must be no intermediary between the skin and the sunlight, for the chemical power of the solar rays is completely nullified by clothing and by glass. The inclination of the rays is also important; when they fall perpendicularly their action is much greater; oblique rays, on the contrary, do not reach the surface of the skin, and are without effect."

ANTIQUITY OF FAKED FOODS

Pliny Tells of the Adulterations Practiced in Ancient Rome—Wines Often Were Doctored.

So much is heard of pure food laws and food adulteration these days that one is prone to assume that the abuse in question is a result of modern conditions of trade and competition. Such, however, is not the case, for the Greeks and Romans complained as bitterly as the man of today of the adulteration of their food.

In Pliny is found an account setting forth how the bakers of Rome were wont to mix with their dough a white earth, so that the touch and sweet to the taste, thus turning out a foodstuff that had weight and fine appearance, but little food value.

Pliny also touches upon wine adulteration. He assures us that not even the rich Roman noble could be sure that the wine he purchased was pure. Moreover, the famous wines of Falerno were doctored, and wines from Gaul generally esteemed to be the best were as a matter of fact artificially colored by aloes and other drugs.

Much complaint was made in Athens touching wine adulteration, so that in time it became necessary to appoint special inspectors with a view to putting an end to the evil.

There was a wine merchant named Cantharus, who was so skillful in the matter of adulteration that his name actually became a synonym for the expression "clever cheat."

Cantharus' long suit was in imparting the favors of old age to new wine.

And so on. Throughout Europe, from the tenth century onward, are found numerous instances of food adulteration in general practice by bakers, brewers, vintners, etc.

Paint Made of Smoke.

Take a small quantity of Pittsburgh ash, wash thoroughly and turn loose, advises a writer in Success Magazine. Strain the wash water and add acetone, which is a chemical which a sylvan man claims to know about. The result is a paint which is said to be durable and cheap and especially adapted for painting iron work. The same may be recaptured and used again, but the smoke is successful for.

A Double Advantage.

It rarely happens in everyday life that any one has the privilege of testing the old adage, "Killing two birds with one stone," so thoroughly as the hero of the following anecdote. Charles Godfrey Leland is responsible for it.

"I once knew a gentleman named Stewart," he wrote. "While camping out, en route, and in a tent with him, I chanced that among the other gentlemen who had tented with us there were two terrible snorers.

"Now Mr. Stewart had heard that you may stop a man's snoring by whistling, and here was a wonderful opportunity. So I waited until my man was coming down with his snore, diminished, and the other was rising, crescendo, and at the exact point of intersection, I blew my air whistle, and so got both birds at one shot. I stopped them both."—Youth's Companion.

Women in the Wrong Place.

The snowdrift of this latest edition of the center of the British empire, crowded to overflowing, while millions of acres of the richest land in fine climates lie under a blanket of ice. The last struck the national imagination. We cannot open a paper without seeing articles about the wheat fields of Canada, the fruit farms of British Columbia or Rhodesia, the offers of work for British men and women in Australia, New Zealand, and last but not least, South Africa. But in large movements of every kind it is exceedingly difficult to preserve the regard, even progression of parts. Some portions of the mass will move slower, others faster, and the rest, thereby causing a distortion and dislocation of the whole. That section of the community known as the better women is being lagged behind the rest, and by their scarcity in the one place and her superfluity in the other is creating a danger to society.—London Times.

PLATINIZED GLASS.

It Produces an Odd and a Tricky Kind of Mirror.

Platinized glass consists of a piece of glass coated with an exceedingly thin layer of a liquid charged with platinum and then raised to a red heat. The platinum becomes united to the glass in such a way as to form an odd kind of mirror.

The glass has not really lost its transparency, and yet if one places it against a wall and looks at it he sees his image as in an ordinary looking glass. But when light is allowed to come through the glass from the other side, as when it is placed in a window, it appears perfectly transparent, like ordinary glass.

By constructing a window of platinized glass one could stand close behind the panes in an uninhabited room and behold clearly everything going on outside, while passively looking at the window would behold only a fine mirror or set of mirrors in which their own figures would be reflected while the person inside remained invisible.

In France various tricks have been contrived with the aid of this glass. In one a person seeing what appears to be an ordinary mirror approaches it to gaze upon himself. A sudden change in the mechanism sends light through the glass from the back, whereupon it instantly becomes transparent, and the startled spectator finds himself confronted by some grotesque figure that had been hidden behind the glass.—Harper's Weekly.

WOMEN BUILD BOONE TRIBUTE

Mele Kentuckians Ignore Pioneer Who Built Their State.

In keeping with custom that the observance of Memorial Day is fast largely into the hands of the women of the land is the information that the monument recently erected in the capital of Kentucky to Daniel Boone is the result of an effort by women.

For decades men had talked and done nothing to commemorate this notable specimen of the hardy and intelligent pioneer the frontiersman with an indomitable will, a big brain and an unerring gun. Possessed in high degree of the qualities that are essentially masculine, Daniel Boone it seems, should have especially appealed to men. But the appeal that was heard and heeded was that of his character and career made to women.

And so there stands in Frankfort a modest but sufficient monument to the man who, leading the exodus from Pennsylvania into Kentucky in the early days, helped so signally to lay the foundation of civilization.

ORIGIN OF LLOYD'S.

Humble Beginning of Europe's Great Maritime Agency.

Two centuries ago a man who had a cargo to send to the Mediterranean contrived to get rid of some of the risk by inducing a friend to take an interest with him. It was necessary to write out a statement of contract to which the guarantor subscribed. This was the first underwriting. These two men happened to be frequenters of Lloyd's coffee house in London, which was then a favorite rendezvous for the merchants of the town to gather to discuss business or to gossip.

Others immediately saw the advantage of the scheme which their colleagues had devised, and on the voyage the risk was parceled out among a larger number of the patrons of the coffee house.

Out of this small beginning has grown the great European maritime agency, still bearing the name of the humble coffee house proprietor, and which not only writes risks on vessels but rates them and publishes their arrivals at every port the world over no matter how small or how remote by situated.—"Annals of the American Academy."

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deep-seated and so insidious. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure, or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is the kidney poison, the blood will be thickened, the circulation will be retarded, the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleep, and nervousness. The kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Out of this small beginning has grown the great European maritime agency, still bearing the name of the humble coffee house proprietor, and which not only writes risks on vessels but rates them and publishes their arrivals at every port the world over no matter how small or how remote by situated.—"Annals of the American Academy."

WATER AN AID TO DIGESTION

Medical Investigators Have Concluded That Plentiful Drinking at Meals Is Distinctly Beneficial.

Medical investigators have reached the conclusion that instead of being harmful to drink quantities of water with meals it is distinctly beneficial. Recent experiments along this line are described in The New York Medical Journal. The writer says:

"Not long ago it was almost the rule for physicians to discourage the habit of drinking water except in minimum amounts with meals, on the ground that the gastric juice was thereby diluted and that digestion was impaired and delayed. This opinion is still held by many physicians, and is the pet hobby of a great many diet cranks and cranks—professional and amateur."

"On the other hand, there have been many who believed that an appetite was widely distributed as the desire to eat at the time of eating an appetite seen in so many animals as well as in man, was a perfectly safe guide to trust, and that it was obviously a provision of Nature to supply water which was needed at this time."

"Recent experimental evidence seems to confirm the latter view. The work of Foster and Lambert has shown that water is a distinct stimulant to the gastric mucosa, and that instead of the presence of water in the stomach resulting in a dilute gastric juice, it, on the other hand, occasions the secretion of a juice of higher concentration than under ordinary circumstances."

"More recently Fowler and Hawk have made a study of the metabolic influences of copious water drinking with meals. A normal man, 25 years of age, was studied for a preliminary period and then for a period of five days, during which he drank three quarts of water a day with his meals. The result showed an increase in weight of two pounds."

HAS NEAT TRAP FOR INSECTS

Device Patented By An Oregonian For the Protection of His Apple Orchard.

In the country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregonian who probably has his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species, patented a trap for the pests.

A barrel has pieces cut out of the upper portion and is half-filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odoriferous fruit. On top of the barrel is placed a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that keeps the barrel from falling off the barrel hangs a lantern.

In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the light of the lantern will attract them from afar to flutter about it and meet their death in the liquid below.

Nice's Pumpkin Festival.

The pumpkin festival at Nice is one of the oldest and most popular of the world. It is a celebration singularly unique, in that the wildest exuberance of spirit alternates with serious ceremonies, representations of art and promiscuous business dealings—a celebration so quaint and so little like the usual productions of modern man that it leaves one with the impression of having witnessed a scene idealized upon the stage rather than an actual festival of the present generation.

Yet the pumpkin custom undoubtedly reflects the character and individuality of its resuscitators, the inhabitants of Nice, whose deep religious and artistic, innate refinement of feeling and intense love of the beautiful were the underlying forces which prompted them to revive a time-honored custom without the least trace of vulgar ostentation or sordid materialism to mar its perfect harmony.—Wild World Magazine.

Fish Influenced by the Moon?

A recent report of the Scotch fishery board mentioned a curious fact which, according to fishermen, is associated with fish; the phases of the moon, it was asserted, have a very direct connection with the willingness of fish to be netted.

To test this theory statistics were obtained of the catch of herrings from 1880 to 1900, with the result that the biggest catches were found to have coincided with new moon and the smallest with full moon. The report suggested that a full moon, when the nets to be seen much more easily than at the times of new moon or the crescent phase or that the tides, which vary with the lunar phases, were possible factors in the matter.—Westminster Gazette.

Strange Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, amusements, sallies, communications, circulations, battalions" as new-fangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. Today nearly all these are in the modern orthodox English. In his time "mob" seems commonly to have been written "mob," and "phib" also had the out-of-date sound. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest, as the owl fattened her nose after she had bit off her legs to prevent them from running away."

WALKING SALOON POPULAR.

Indiana Streets Swarm With Sunday Liquor Law Eviders.

He walks along the Indianapolis streets on Sunday, a covered basket on his arm, a broken gaze for all "coppers" and a sly wink for all dry drinkers. He is the "walking saloon," brought into being by Mayor Shank's Sunday closing order. The police are looking for him, but thus far have found only two of him. Two hundred more of him are said to be tramping the streets on Sunday.

The "walking saloon" does not confuse its efforts to laying the parched whistles of Indianapolis thirty-one dry territory in Indiana at any and all times, and now that three-fourths of the state is dry.

The "walking saloon" does not carry a license. His only incumbrance is a big basket loaded with bad booze. He gets it on Saturday and peddles it on Sunday to the highways and byways of the city and state. He is a puzzle to the police, for all law-breakers are not "walking saloons," although all "walking saloons" are basket carriers.

The Springbok.

A peculiarity of that most beautiful of South African antelopes the springbok is that it always leaps over human tracks. It is at once exceedingly shy and marvelously active, and the reason for this strange antic is its intense suspicion of any possible enemies, among whom it has come to recognize man as the most dangerous. It is not only with human tracks that the springbok goes through this performance, for it does the same with the tracks of lions or even when it gets wind of a lion. The leap is exceedingly graceful, and the animal covers from twelve to fifteen feet at each bound. It drops on all four feet at once and immediately rises again, making a clear spring without any run. Its usual gait when not pursued is a light springy trot. The springbok usually travels with its nose to the ground, as if constantly on the lookout for the scent of enemies.

The Origin of Grocers.

Grocers appear in Holinshed's Chronicle, 1580, as "grosser," and in other medieval records it is sometimes written "engrosser" and was applied to the apothecaries and pepperers who were wholesale dealers in various spices—that is, who dealt in gross—in large quantities, as distinguished from "retailers," who were retail dealers. The Grocers' company first adopted the word grocer in 1573, when the apothecaries and pepperers allied themselves into a single corporation—London Express.

THE GOING AWAY OF DR. MATHER.

On Monday of last week came from Russellville, Ky., that the Louisville Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. South had taken Dr. Mather away from Hardinsburg, and had assigned him to the pastorate of the church at Marion, county seat of Crittenden county.

In the going of Dr. Mather, Hardinsburg and Breckinridge county loses one who for the last two years has wielded a greater influence for good than perhaps any minister of the gospel who has ever resided in our midst, and we take this opportunity of publicly acknowledging the inestimable service rendered so unselfishly and unhesitatingly by Dr. Mather in every cause which had for its object the advancement of the interests of his fellowmen.

It seems but a few days since Dr. Mather came to reside in our midst, yet evidence is abundant on all hands of the touch of the master hand in the helping forward of the deepest interests of the community, and of the abiding influence which he has exerted upon the leading citizens of our county.

Coming as a sick man, with the intention of resting from the heavier duties of pastoral life to which he had been accustomed, it was not at first thought that Dr. Mather would reach out beyond the immediate duties of his own pastoral office; but scarcely had his household goods been unpacked, before he was found actively interested in everybody, and striving to lay foundations for usefulness everywhere, the result being that today he leaves a gap behind him which none can fill.

When asked why he had turned down a call of this character, Dr. Mather replied "You know I have been brought up in Methodistism, and I deeply appreciate the confidence of other denominations, and labor constantly to cultivate the 'entire cord' with all the churches, yet I feel that my best work can be done in the ranks to which I am most accustomed."

So goes from our midst one whose welcome greeting will be missed, and whose never-failing counsel will be cherished as coming from the heart of a man whom God has touched, and one in whom the people could, and can always find a friend and a helper. May long life be his, and may his consecrated talents find fullest scope for their usefulness.

We sincerely congratulate the citizens of Marion and of Crittenden County on their good fortune, and trust that that will give our dearly loved friend that welcome which he so richly deserves.

In this issue we publish with the courtesy of "Chain-Light" the magazine devoted to the electrical business of Louisville, a picture of Mr. C. Lee Cook and his factory. He is president of the C. Lee Cook Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of Cook's metallic rod and corliss valve stem packing. Mr. Cook's invention and his achievements are wonders and are not only being recognized and accepted by all builders of machinery, but are reaping for him a compensation financially. The article accompanying the cut was written by A. T. Macdonald and gracefully reveals the secret of Mr. Cook's success. This short sketch is a stimulant to men of the mechanical world and to those occupied in other pursuits of magnitude. The story is a true one. The News well remembers when Lee Cook was a boy, struggling for the results he has obtained.

At Hardinsburg Monday the large number of voters from this county present were thoroughly convinced that we have two splendid, dependable men in Judge Settle and Ben Johnson, who are so well equipped for the offices we shall give them. At the speaking there was a spirit of harmony among the men and an assurance that all would work together and cast their votes for those candidates. Every Democrat under the sound of their voices was proud to know that he will have the chance to vote for them for such type of men are few and far between in politics.

Tomorrow we must put our latch strings on the outside to the Louisvilleans who are to pay us a short visit and prove to them that we have not forgotten what The Louisville Commercial Club did for the fire-stricken Cloverport ten years ago. Louisville was our friend in time of the need—the greatest friend of all. To show that we are "for Louisville" let us meet at the depot tomorrow afternoon and give her representatives a right hearty welcome to our popular port.

The Hardinsburg Bank & Trust Company certainly did a big business last Monday. Cashier Beard and his assistant, Paul Covington, were busy all day handling the money that poured into their hands like apples out of a barrel. And money is never in safer keeping than when it is in the care of these bankers.

Glen Dean is the new way to write the name of that good old place. We like Glendene better—its hard to teach an old dog new capers.

Dr. Arthur Mather and family left Monday for Marion for his ministerial work for the ensuing year. Universal regret is felt at their leaving. To all people they endeared themselves. KEEPING DOWN THE COST.

But What Is the Distracted Housewife to Do?

Until the lawmakers and the professors of political science and the rest of the wise ones have succeeded in settling this little matter of the cost of living to their entire and complete satisfaction, it behooves the housewife to go right on solving it for herself, just as they have been trying to do for the last dozen years or so.

Of course it gives one a comfortable, reassured feeling to know that the men are bestirring themselves in the matter, but in the meantime the women must pick right on and make a bold attempt to make both ends meet, with milk that isn't entirely skimmed at 10 cents a quart and eggs at 5 cents a dozen.

The argument advanced that the original packages, with its paper or cardboard wrappings, adds to the expense of the food bought is true enough. In the old days when we bought cereals in bulk as well as dried fruits, tapioca, raisins and in fact almost every other edible that now comes out up in packages, we don't need pay less for them. Somebody, of course, must pay for the wrappings, and that somebody is very naturally the consumer.

But what is the distracted housekeeper to do? It is cold comfort to tell her how much she pays for cardboard boxes, when she has just finished reading a touching appeal in some magazine urging her to use these packages on account of their cleanliness. "Avoid the common cracker barrel, the open milk sack; in fact, all unprotected foods in which germ laden dust may find residence," is the cry. And so the thing goes around in a circle and the only way out of it is a fresh resolve to watch the little leaks a little closer.

One cooking authority, thinking that she was making an illuminating suggestion in the matter, writes complacently, "Instead of expensive meats, eat cheap, substitute onions or poached eggs whenever possible."

That's highly entertaining, now, isn't it, and helpful to the frugal housewife? She would have done better to have reversed her advice and said: "Instead of the tasty omelet as a breakfast dish, substitute a good, thick potterhouse steak. It will be cheaper these days."

But happily there are other things besides eggs and meat which will make a good meal, and it is the business of the housewife to find them.

It often happens that the easy things that can be quickly prepared are more expensive than some of those dishes which take a little more time and thought to make palatable. A piece of meat to fry is much less costly than something which is cooked in a casserole with vegetables and flavor, and variety. But the difference in cost is worth while.

A Few Cures.

As this is the time for squamous, mosquito bites, ivy poison, here are some cures.

To prevent squamous before being exposed put a little cold cream on the exposed parts and dust with talcum powder.

To cure squamous put one ounce of epsom salts in one pint of cold water, wet a cloth in the solution and put on the burns. If badly swollen wet cloth every twenty minutes until better.

For ivy poison make a moist paste of bicarbonate of soda and apply several times a day.

Don't scratch mosquito bites; you may get local poison. Touch the bite with common household ammonia. It will relieve at once.

If caterpillars should get on any part of the body dust with a little corn starch. It will stop the itching at once.

A Dainty Party Trick.

enough for the most dressy occasion. The trick from which the design was drawn is of white organdie sprinkled over with a tiny yellow flower, the frill about the neck and sleeves being of white Paris muslin, hand embroidered and plaited. A head in which black velvet has been run finishes the neck and sleeves, while the girde is of black tan velvet.

"Science" Becoming a Nuisance.

Steadily medical science is closing its avenues of safety. There was when man might do pretty much as he pleased and live. Now whatever he may do is deadly. The Chicago health department has just issued a warning against country springs. In the petulard water of these springs death lurks in all of its hideous forms. Also to quaff a cooling from the "Old Oaken Bucket" is dangerous. What to drink was long a matter of price rather than choice. But now it is a matter of neither choice nor price. It is a matter of life or death. The danger is as well as the danger. The danger is as well as the danger. The danger is as well as the danger.

It is unkind of "science" to point out so many dangers and not to indicate any path of safety that the ordinary person will be content to travel. Perhaps the most comfortable thing, if not the most, to do, is to take a chance now and then and refuse to be alarmed. Trusting these few lines, etc.

SAFEGUARD OF ALL FREEDOM

Without Liberty of the Press the World Would Return to Its Old Barbarism.

The liberty of the press is the highest safeguard of all free government. Ours could not exist without it. It is like a great exulting and abounding river. It is fed by the dew of heaven and the rain of the sky. It flows to form it. It gushes from the rift as it breaks from the deep caverns of the earth. It is augmented by a thousand affluents that descend from the mountains to separate again into a thousand bounteous and irrigating streams around.

On its broad bosom it bears a thousand bark. There galas spreads its purpling sail. There poetry dips its silver oar. There art, invention, discovery, science, morality, religion may safely and securely float. It wanders through every land. It has a genial, cordial source of thought and inspiration wherever it touches, whatever it surrounds. Upon its borders there grows every flower of grace and every fruit of truth.

Sometimes that river oversteps its bounds. Sometimes that stream becomes a dangerous torrent and destroys towns and cities upon its banks. But without it, civilization, humanity, government—all that makes society itself—would disappear and the world would return to its ancient barbarism. —Edward D. Baker.

World's Oldest Tree.

The recent rose show given in Paris by the French Horticultural society recalled the fact that the oldest rose tree in the world is believed to be one which grows on a wall of the cathedral at Hildesheim, Germany. Elevate-century records make mention of expenses incurred by caretakers of the cathedral in maintaining this tree, which covers the wall to a height of twenty-five feet and is twenty inches thick at the root.

A NOBLE RED MAN.

He Was Not the Stately Chief Wobesley Expected to Meet.

Lord Wobesley was stationed in Canada many years ago, on one occasion he spent a holiday in the wilds, including a wigwam and practicing generally what he should now call the "back to nature" cure.

It was soon after his arrival in the country, and as the means of communication were still somewhat primitive he had never seen an Indian and was most anxious to make the red man's acquaintance. Some friends of his promised to send one or two to see him, as there was an encampment not very far away.

At last one morning Lord Wobesley was informed that a chief had come to see him. With his mind full of the conventional Indian, a man of commanding presence, arrayed in all the glory of paint and feathers, he eagerly stripped outside his wigwam to make his acquaintance. But he received a rude shock when he found a wizened personage dressed in a tattered frock coat and ancient waistcoat.

However, the general stifled his astonishment and played the genial host, although, horribly bored at the incessant chatter of the Indian, who had been in the service of the Hudson Bay company and therefore could speak broken English fairly to the point of unintelligibility.

At length anxious to get rid of his visitor, he took a twenty-five cent piece out of his pocket and, fearing he might be grossly insulting his visitor, presented it to him.

The latter took it, looked at it carefully, felt the edges and then said: "An you make it half dollar?"

THE WET RAIN.

There Are Several Varieties, and All Have Their Whims.

Rain is principally composed of water, but it should not be confused with maling stock.

Rain always comes on Sunday afternoons and week days.

Sunday day may be changed to any day in the week, systematically or indiscriminately, but the rule will come.

Sunday afternoon, however, cannot be changed to any other afternoon. The rule will hold off until you are ready to go driving, and then the word will be passed along the mysterious currents of the air, and a double order of clouds and cumulus will be hurried in from the west.

Also in the morning, when you leave home and carry your umbrella and raincoat, the rule will go away and sink. But if you take heart of the fair sky and leave the umbrella and other trinkets, then the rule will wait until you leave the office and then get you. Incidentally it will tick a few grip and rheumatism germs into your system.

Rain is good for the crops, but why it takes you for a crop is hard to understand.

Rain never brought fame to any one except Noah. Probably on the day the flood began he watched the last picnic party drive out of town in a bus, shouting sarcastic things at him through the windows.

There are several varieties of rain, but the one most popular with the weather bureau is called "Probably." —Chicago News.

A Great Assistance.

"Good morning," greeted the young man in the breadbasket stall.

The millinist turned around in his plush chair.

"Is I think you have the advantage of me, young man," he said distantly.

"Was, don't you remember me, sir? I am broke. Two years ago you told me if I ever went broke to come around and see you."

The millinist beamed a benevolent smile.

"So I did, son; so I did. Here is the envelope all ready for you."

The young man took the bulky envelope, and his spirit rose like the mercury on a July day.

"Ah, a little assistance, I suppose?"

"No, a great assistance. It is a valuable little pamphlet I wrote during my spare time entitled 'How to Be Broke and Happy.'"—Chicago News.

Persian Shawls.

The "shawl" of Persian—whence our word "shawl"—is made of goats' hair. Like the carpets, the shawl patterns are learned by heart, and the work is even finer. "Children also do this work. It is estimated that Persian turans cost $300,000,000 of shawls, handwoven, a year. The newest product is a fine pattern, a rich color effect, and an even dilly for the governor of the province, who wears it as a robe of honor on the Persian New Year's day."

He Got Her.

"It's so long since you called upon me," said the girl as she came down to the young man in the parlor. "What I was beginning to think you were forgetting me."

"I am for getting you," replied the smart young man. "and that's why I've called tonight. Can I have you?"

A Real Crisis.

"Johnnie, do you understand what is meant by a crisis?"

"Yes, mum."

"Tell us, Johnnie."

JUST QUESTION OF KNOWING

Monopolist Explains to Plain Citizen Why He May Stand on Latter's Foot.

"You are standing on my foot," said the citizen to the monopolist.

"Ah, you must not think of that," good-naturedly replied the monopolist. "It is soiled and pestilential. You should think of the higher things of life."

"Yes, but it hurts," argues the citizen.

"That may be, but remember that it is only through trial and tribulation that we learn to make something of ourselves. Blessed are the meek."

"Yes, but why should you stand on my foot?"

"I see you are inclined to think of yourself that is wrong," admonished the monopolist in a gentle tone. "Remember you should contemplate the good I have done in the world."

"That may all be true, but I think I shall have to ask you to get off my foot."

"Being a Christian gentleman," replied the monopolist, very gently, "I take no umbrage at your unkind, not to say unreasonable, request. But what you ask is unconstitutional, and I must insist on my constitutional rights. I have a franchise to your foot. That is the legal phase of it. But there is also a moral side. I have become accustomed to that mode of standing. For you to try to change it now would be nothing less than unpatriotic."

"Notwithstanding all that I must insist that you get off my foot."

"In that case, my dear sir, I shall have to appeal to the courts and get out an injunction against you."

"Do you deny that it is my foot?" hotly demanded the citizen.

"I do not deny that; in a sense it is your foot," blandly returned the monopolist. "But I think I can show that I have a controlling interest in it."

Teaching Correct Speech.

A woman of culture and travel has made a glorious success teaching correct speech. It is surprising how much incorrect speech there is among our educated people. They cling to provincialisms, incorrect pronunciations, wrong use of words, and unmusical intonations. The southerner holds to the soft, rising intonation of his "manners" days; the middle westerner flattens his vowels; the Bostonian throws his r's completely out of joint. This woman undertook to correct such errors and teach a pure, perfect English speech to a few young women. She became so successful that she was compelled to start a school of correct English which has grown to great proportions. This particularly promising field is open in every town in America.—The Delineator.

A WEIGHTY REASON.

It Told Why One of the Nineteen Commissioners Was Executed.

Before a certain gentleman set out for Japan and India his relatives gave him errands. One wanted an Indian shawl, another a silver Buddha, a third a chrysanthemum carving, and so on, till the list of commissions was appalling. He agreed, however, to fill them so far as possible.

But when he returned he had executed but one of the nineteen commissions that had been given him. He had brought back only the chrysanthemum carving. This he gave to one smiling cousin amid the disappointed looks of the other relatives. Why, the disappointed ones asked, had he executed that one particular commission and disregarded the rest?

"The traveler smiled. 'It happened,' he began quietly, 'that each of my relatives had written your commission on a sheet of paper. On the second day of the voyage out I took all these sheets of paper from my notebook, opened them and spread them on my lap as I reclined in my stowaway chair.

"The air was very still at the time, but suddenly a brisk wind sprang up and every sheet was blown away except that of Cousin Max. Max's sheet was weighted down with the gold coin he had given me to pay for his carving."—St. James' Gazette.

AFTER you have been a year or so in the electrical business you begin to realize how short a distance even science has led us. The accomplishment has been mighty yet the possibilities are as yet unfathomed. Edison and other leaders are big enough and brave enough to say, "We are only on the threshold."

—There are hundreds and thousands of men at work on problems, the solving of which will revolutionize trade and commerce and which will add to your business and social comfort.

—One sometimes doubts whether the present generation has the bump of curiosity sufficiently developed.

—Or does it take more kindly to joy riding than to the pursuit of knowledge?

—Go around to a night school and you will find two dozen boys—working for their own and the world's benefit.

—Go around to the dance halls night after night and you will find two thousand boys embracing two thousand more or less empty headed girls—and they think they are living. And dancing is all right—as a diversion, but not as a habit.

—We read stories of Lincoln and his candle light, of Alexander Stephens and his studies aided by the light of a pile log. We once heard of boys who trudged miles upon miles to and from school, morning and night—hungry for an education.

—But we don't hear so much of it nowadays. Somehow we cannot get away from the seeming fact that each generation is producing more flashes and fewer steady flames!—The race for riches, the feverish desire to do something in a day, seems to have put frugality and plodding out of business.

—But even now and then we find some example of manhood which restores our faith in the old ideals.

—In this instance it is a man physically encumbered by nature—and near to helplessness—from childhood.

—He smiled his way through youth—and he read everything he could get his fingers on. He digested knowledge until he knew the world better than those who do not read will ever know it.

—As maturity approached his mind developed amazingly. The spark of the inventive genius was alive in that brain.

—Finding his vent, he read and read all that he could get hold of pertaining to machinery, engineering and electricity.

—The world is cold enough to men of bone and sinew and health and strength—but too often indifferent to the opposite.

—Did that man mind that? Not he—instead he buckled on the armor of knowledge and proceeded to storm the ramparts of commerce.

—His ideas were laughed at—but not out of court. His theories were scoffed—but did not fade away.

—With unabated zeal he returned to the attack again and again and finally an order for the product of his brain led to an adequate test of the invention.

—And he triumphed.

—To-day C. Lee Cook runs his own factory, lauded by his workmen, is successful and happy.

—Mr. Cook's pursuits in history, philosophy and literature have been as deep and general as his study of engineering and electricity, and he has found time to write considerably on these things—Chained Lightning. Published by Louisville Lightning Company.
